Higginson was pitching to one of the seventeen other wicked young men at Red Top when he stepped into a small hole. Higginson yelled, fell. The other had ball players carried him to Red Top on an improvised stretcher.

Dr. Benedlot hurried to the captain's relief. Dr. Darling, who came all the way from Cambridge to take care of the carsmen, was on hand, of course.

Then he was carried to his quarters and an examination showed that his ankle had been broken. There is no joy in Harvard quarters to-day.
